PLEASURES OF HOPE.

PART I.

Analysis of Part I.

The Poem opens with a comparison between the beauty of remote objects in a landscape, and those ideal scenes of felicity which the imagination delights to contemplate....the influence of anticipation upon the other passions is next delineated....an allusion is made to the well-known fiction in Pagan tradition, that, when all the guardian deities of mankind abandoned the world, Hope alone was left behind....the consolations of this passion in situations of danger and distress....the seaman on his midnight watch....the soldier marching into battle....allusion to the interesting adventures of Byron.

The inspiration of Hope, as it actuates the efforts of genius, whether in the department of science, or of taste....domestic felicity, how intimately connected with views of future happiness....picture of a mother watching her infant when asleep ....pictures of the prisoner, the maniac, and the wanderer.

From the consolations of individual misery, a transition is made to prospects of political improvement in the future state of society....the wide field that is yet open for the progress of humanizing arts among uncivilized nations....from these views of amelioration of society, and the extension of liberty and truth over despotic and barbarous countries, by a melancholy contrast of ideas we are led to reflect upon the hard fate of a brave people recently conspicuous in their struggles for independence....description of the capture of Warsaw, of the last contest of the oppressors and the oppressed, and the massacre of the Polish patriots at the bridge of Prague....apostrophe to the self-interested enemies of human improvement....the wrongs of Africa....the barbarous policy of Europeans in India....prophecy in the Hindoo mythology of the expected descent of the Deity to redress the miseries of their race, and to take vengeance on the violators of justice and mercy.

PART I.

At summer eve, when Heav'n's aërial bow
Spans with bright arch the glittering hills below,
Why to yon mountain turns the musing eye,
Whose sun-bright summit mingles with the sky?
Why do those cliffs of shadowy tint appear
More sweet than all the landscape smiling near?—
'Tis distance lends enchantment to the view,
And robes the mountain in its azure hue.

Thus, with delight, we linger to survey
The promis'd joys of life's unmeasur'd way;
Thus, from afar, each dim-discover'd scene
More pleasing seems than all the past hath been;
And every form, that Fancy can repair
From dark oblivion, glows divinely there.

What potent spirit guides the raptur'd eye
To pierce the shades of dim futurity?
Can Wisdom lend, with all her heav'nly pow'r,
The pledge of Joy's anticipated hour?
Ah, no! she darkly sees the fate of man—
Her dim horizon bounded to a span;
Or, if she hold an image to the view,
'Tis Nature pictur'd too severely true.

Published as the Act directs by Longman & C.° Jan.y 1.st 1808.

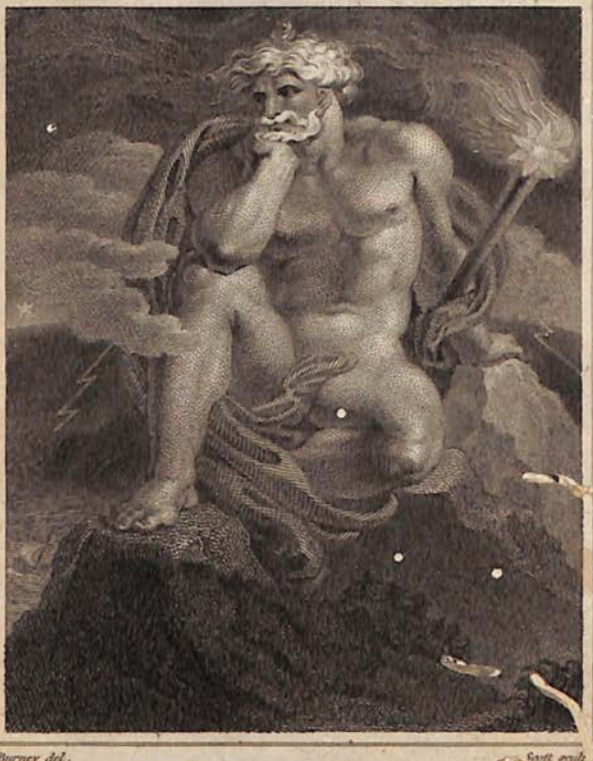
With thee, sweet Hope! resides the heav'nly light,
That pours remotest rapture on the sight:
Thine is the charm of life's bewilder'd way,
That calls each slumb'ring passion into play.
Wak'd by thy touch, I see the sister band,
On tiptoe watching, start at thy command,
And fly where'er thy mandate bids them steer,
To Pleasure's path, or Glory's bright career.

Primeval Hope, th' Aonian Muses say,
When Man and Nature mourn'd their first decay;
When every form of death, and every woe,
Hot from malignant stars to earth below;
When murder bared her arm, and rampant War
Yok'd the red dragons of his iron car;

When Peace and Mercy, banish'd from the plain,
Sprung on the viewless winds to Heav'n again;
All, all forsook the friendless guilty mind,
But Hope, the charmer, linger'd still behind.

Thus, while Elijah's burning wheels prepare,
From Carmel's height, to sweep the fields of air,
The prophet's mantle, ere his flight began,
Dropt on the world—a sacred gift to man.

Auspicious Hope! in thy sweet garden grow
Wreaths for each toil, a charm for every woe:
Won by their sweets, in Nature's languid hour,
The way-worn pilgrim seeks thy summer bower.
There, as the wild bee murmurs on the wing,
What peaceful dreams thy handmaid spirits bring!



Burney del. Scott sculp.

Now on Atlantic waves he rides afar,
Where Andes, giant of the western star,
With meteor-standard to the winds unfurl'd,
Looks from his throne of clouds o'er half the world.

Published as the Act directs by Longman & C.° Jan.y 1.st 1808.

What viewless forms th' Æolian organ play,
And sweep the furrow'd lines of anxious thought away!

Angel of life! thy glittering wings explore
Earth's loneliest bounds, and Ocean's wildest shore.
Lo! to the wintry winds the pilot yields
His bark careering o'er unfathom'd fields;
Now on Atlantic waves he rides afar,
Where Andes, giant of the western star,
With meteor-standard to the winds unfurl'd,
Looks from his throne of clouds o'er half the world.

Now far he sweeps, where scarce a summer smiles,
On Behring's rocks, or Greenland's naked isles;
Cold on his midnight watch the breezes blow,
From wastes that slumber in eternal snow;

And waft, across the wave's tumultuous roar,
The wolf's long howl from Oonalaska's shore.

Poor child of danger, nursling of the storm,
Sad are the woes that wreck thy manly form!
Rocks, waves, and winds, the shatter'd bark delay;
Thy heart is sad, thy home is far away.

But Hope can here her moonlight vigils keep,
And sing to charm the spirit of the deep:
Swift as yon streamer lights the starry pole,
Her visions warm the watchman's pensive soul.
His native hills that rise in happier climes
The grot that heard his song of other times,
His cottage home, his bark, slender sail,
His glassy lake, and broomwood-blossom'd vale,

Rush on his thought; he sweeps before the wind,
Treads the lov'd shore he sigh'd to leave behind;
Meets at each step a friend's familiar face,
And flies at last to Helen's long embrace;
Wipes from her cheek the rapture-speaking tear,
And clasps, with many a sigh, his children dear!
While, long neglected, but at length caress'd,
His faithful dog salutes the smiling guest,
Looks to the master's eyes (where'er they roam)
His wistful face, and whines a welcome home.

Friend of the brave! in peril's darkest hour,
Intrepid virtue looks to thee for power;
To thee the heart its trembling homage yields,
On stormy floods, and [illegible]age-cover'd fields,

When front to front the banner'd hosts combine,
Halt ere they close, and form the dreadful line.
When all is still on Death's devoted soil,
The march-worn soldier mingles for the toil;
As rings his glitt'ring tube, he lifts on high
The dauntless brow, and spirit-speaking eye,
Hails in his heart the triumph yet to come,
And hears thy stormy music in the drum!

And such thy strength-inspiring aid that bore
The hardy Byron to his native shore—[a]
In horrid climes, where Chiloe's tempests sweep
Tumultuous murmurs o'er the troubled deep,
'Twas his to mourn Misfortune's rudest shock,
Scourg'd by the winds, and toss'd on the rock,
To wake each joyless morn, and search again
The famish'd haunts of solitary men;

Whose race, unyielding as their native storm,
Knows not a trace of Nature but the form;
Yet, at thy call, the hardy tar pursued,
Pale, but intrepid,—sad, but unsubdued,
Pierc'd the deep woods, and, hailing from afar,
The moon's pale planet and the northern star,
Paus'd at each dreary cry, unheard before,
Hyænas in the wild, and mermaids on the shore;
Till'd by thee o'er many a cliff sublime,
He found a warmer world, a milder clime,
A home to rest, a shelter to defend,
Peace and repose, a Briton and a friend!

Congenial Hope! thy passion-kindling power,
How bright, how strong in youth's untroubled hour!

On yon proud height, with Genius hand in hand,
I see thee light, and wave thy golden wand.

"Go, child of Heav'n! (thy winged words proclaim
'Tis thine to search the boundless fields of fame!
Lo! Newton, priest of Nature, shines afar,
Scans the wide world, and numbers ev'ry star!
Wilt thou, with him, mysterious rites apply,
And watch the shrine with wonder-beaming eye?
Yes, thou shalt mark, with magic art profound,
The speed of light, the circling march of sound;
With Franklin grasp the lightning's fiery wing,
Or yield the lyre of Heav'n another string.[c]

"The Swedish sage admires in yonder bow'rs,[d]
His winged insects, and his rosy flow'rs;

Calls from their woodland haunts the savage train
With sounding horn, and counts them on the plain—
So once, at Heav'n's command, the wand'rers came
To Eden's shade, and heard their various name.

"Far from the world, in yon sequester'd clime,
Slow pass the sons of wisdom, more sublime;
Calm as the fields of Heav'n, his sapient eye
The lov'd Athenian lifts to realms on high,
Admiring Plato, on his spotless page,
Stamps the bright dictates of the Father sage:
'Shall Nature bound to Earth's diurnal span
The fire of God, th' immortal soul of man!'

"Turn, child of Heav'n! thy rapture-lighten'd eye
To Wisdom's walks, the sacred Nine are nigh!

Hark! from bright spires that gild the Delphian height,
From streams that wander in eternal light,
Rang'd on their hill, Harmonia's daughters swell
The mingling tones of horn, and harp, and shell;
Deep from his vaults, the Loxian murmurs flow,[e]
And Pythia's awful organ peals below.

" Belov'd of heav'n! the smiling Muse shall shed
Her moonlight halo on thy beauteous head;
Shall swell thy heart to rapture unconfin'd,
And breathe a holy madness o'er thy mind.
I see thee roam her guardian pow'r beneath,
And talk with spirits on the midnight heath;
Inquire of guilty wand'rers whence they came,
And ask each blood-stain'd form his earthly name;

Then weave in rapid verse the deeds they tell,
And read the trembling world the tales of hell.

"When Venus, thron'd in clouds of rosy hue,
Flings from her golden urn the vesper dew,
And bids fond man her glimmering noon employ,
Sacred to love, and walks of tender joy;
A milder mood the goddess shall recal,
And soft as dew thy tones of music fall;
While Beauty's deeply-pictur'd smiles impart,
A pang more dear than pleasure to the heart—
Warm as thy sighs shall flow the Lesbian strain,
And plead in Beauty's ear, nor plead in vain.

"Or wilt thou Orphean hymns more sacred deem,
And steep thy song in Mercy's mellow stream;

To pensive drops the radiant eye beguile—
For Beauty's tears are lovelier than her smile;—
On Nature's throbbing anguish pour relief,
And teach impassion'd souls the joy of grief?

"Yes; to thy tongue shall seraph words be giv'n
And pow'r on earth to plead the cause of Heav'n;
The proud, the cold untroubled heart of stone,
That never mus'd on sorrow but its own,
Unlocks a generous store at thy command,
Like Horeb's rocks beneath the prophet's hand.[f]
The living lumber of his kindred earth,
Charm'd into soul, receives a second birth;
Feels thy dread pow'r another heart afford,
Whose passion-touch'd harmonious strings accord

True as the circling spheres to Nature's plan;
And man, the brother, lives the friend of man!

" Bright as the pillar rose at Heav'n's command,
When Israel march'd along the desert land,
Blaz'd through the night on lonely wilds afar,
And told the path—a never-setting star:
So, heav'nly Genius, in thy course divine,
Hope is thy star, her light is ever thine."

Propitious Pow'r! when rankling cares annoy
The sacred home of Hymenean joy;
Where doom'd to Poverty's sequester'd dell,
The wedded pair of love and virtue dwell,
Unpitied by the world, unknown to fame,
Their woes, their wishes, and their hearts the same—

Oh there, prophetic Hope! thy smile bestow,
And chase the pangs that worth should never know—
There, as the parent deals his scanty store
To friendless babes, and weeps to give no more,
Tell, that his manly race shall yet assuage
Their father's wrongs, and shield his latter age.
What though for him no Hybla sweets distil,
Nor bloomy vines wave purple on the hill;
Tell, that when silent years have pass'd away,
That when his eyes grow dim, his tresses grey,
These busy hands a lovelier cot shall build,
And deck with fairer flowers his little field,
And call from Heav'n propitious dews to breathe
Arcadian beauty on the barren heath;
Tell, that while Love's spontaneous smile endears
The days of peace, the sabbath of his years,

Lo, at the couch where infant beauty sleeps,
Her silent watch the mournful mother keeps.

Published as the Act directs by Longman & C.° June 1.st 1808.

Health shall prolong to many a festive hour
The social pleasures of his humble bower.

Lo! at the couch where infant beauty sleeps,
Her silent watch the mournful mother keeps;
She, while the lovely babe unconscious lies,
Smiles on her slumb'ring child with pensive eyes,
And weaves a song of melancholy joy—
"Sleep, image of thy father, sleep, my boy:
No ling'ring hour of sorrow shall be thine;
No sigh that rends thy father's heart and mine;
Bright as his manly sire, the son shall be
In form and soul; but, ah! more blest than he!
Thy fame, thy worth, thy filial love, at last,
Shall soothe this aching heart for all the past—

With many a smile my solitude repay,
And chace the world's ungenerous scorn away.

"And say, when summon'd from the world and thee,
I lay my head beneath the willow tree,
Wilt thou, sweet mourner! at my stone appear,
And soothe my parted spirit ling'ring near?
Oh, wilt thou come, at ev'ning hour, to shed
The tears of Memory o'er my narrow bed;
With aching temples on thy hand reclin'd,
Muse on the last farewel I leave behind,
Breath a deep sigh to winds that murmur low,
And think on all my love, and all my woe?"

So speaks affection, ere the infant eye
Can look regard, or brighten in reply;

But when the cherub lip hath learnt to claim
A mother's ear by that endearing name;
Soon as the playful innocent can prove
A tear of pity, or a smile of love,
Or cons his murm'ring task beneath her care,
Or lisps with holy look his ev'ning prayer,
Or gazing, mutely pensive, sits to hear
The mournful ballad warbled in his ear;
How fondly looks admiring Hope the while,
At every artless tear, and every smile!
How glows the joyous parent to descry
A guileless bosom, true to sympathy!

Where is the troubled heart, consigned to share
Tumultuous toils, or solitary care,
Unblest by visionary thoughts that stray
To count the joys of Fortune's better day?

Lo, nature, life, and liberty relume
The dim-ey'd tenant of the dungeon gloom,
A long lost friend, or hapless child restor'd,
Smiles at his blazing hearth and social board;
Warm from his heart the tears of rapture flow,
And virtue triumphs o'er remember'd woe.

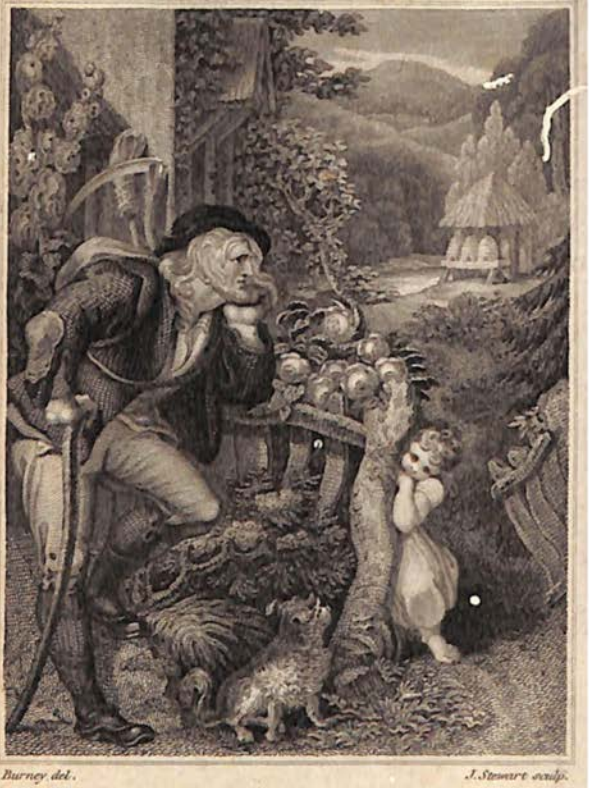
Chide not his peace, proud Reason! nor destroy
The shadowy forms of uncreated joy,
That urge the lingering tide of life, and pour
Spontaneous slumber on his midnight hour.

Hark! the wild maniac sings, to chide the gale
That wafts so slow her lover's distant sail;
She, sad spectatress, on the wintry shore
Watch'd the rude surge his shroudless corse that bore,

Knew the pale form, and, shrieking in amaze,
Clasp'd her cold hands, and fix'd her maddening gaze:
Poor widow'd wretch! 'twas there she wept in vain,
Till memory fled her agonizing brain:—
But Mercy gave, to charm the sense of woe,
Ideal peace, that Truth could ne'er bestow;
Warm on her heart the joys of Fancy beam,
And aimless Hope delights her darkest dream.

Oft when yon moon has climb'd the midnight sky,
And the lone sea-bird wakes its wildest cry,
Pil'd on the steep her blazing faggots burn,
To hail the bark that never can return;
And still she waits, but scarce forbears to weep
That constant love can linger on the deep.

And, mark the wretch, whose wand'rings never know
The world's regard, that soothes, though half untrue.
Whose erring heart the lash of sorrow bore,
But found not pity when it err'd no more.
Yon friendless man, at whose dejected eye
Th' unfeeling proud one looks—and passes by;
Condemn'd on Penury's barren path to roam—
Scorn'd by the world, and left without a home—
Ev'n he, at evening, should he chance to stray
Down by the hamlet's hawthorn-scented way,
Where, round the cot's romantic glade are seen
The blossom'd bean-field, and the sloping green,
Leans o'er its humble gate, and thinks the while—
Oh! that for me some home like this would smile,
Some hamlet shade, to yield my sickly form,
Health in the breeze, and shelter in the storm!



Burney del. J. Stewart sculp.

Leans o'er its humble gate, & thinks the while,
Oh! that for me some home like this would smile,
Some hamlet shade, to yield my sickly form,
Health in the breeze, & shelter in the storm.

Published as the Act directs, by Longman & C.° Jan.ʸ 1.ˢᵗ 1808.

There should my hand no stinted boon assign
To wretched hearts with sorrows such as mine!—
That generous wish can soothe unpitied care,
And Hope half mingles with the poor man's prayer.

Hope! when I mourn, with sympathizing mind,
The wrongs of fate, the woes of human kind,
Thy blissful omens bid my spirit see
The boundless fields of rapture yet to be;
I watch the wheels of Nature's mazy plan,
And learn the future by the past of man.

Come, bright Improvement! on the car of Time,
And rule the spacious world from clime to clime;
Thy handmaid arts shall every wild explore,
Trace every wave, and culture every shore.

On Erie's banks, where tigers steal along,
And the dread Indian chants a dismal song,
Where human fiends on midnight errands walk,
And bathe in brains the murd'rous tomahawk;
There shall the flocks on thymy pasture stray,
And shepherds dance at Summer's op'ning day;
Each wand'ring genius of the lonely glen
Shall start to view the glittering haunts of men,
And silence watch, on woodland heights around,
The village curfew as it tolls profound.

In Lybian groves, where damned rites are done,
That bathe the rocks in blood, and veil the sun,
Truth shall arrest the murd'rous arm profane,
Wild Obi flies [g]—the veil is rent in twain.

Where barb'rous hordes on Scythian mountains roam,
Truth, Mercy, Freedom, yet shall find a home;
Where'er degraded Nature bleeds and pines,
From Guinea's coast to Sibir's dreary mines,[b]
Truth shall pervade th' unfathom'd darkness there,
And light the dreadful features of despair.—
Hark! the stern captive spurns his heavy load,
And asks the image back that heaven bestowed!
Fierce in his eye the fire of valour burns,
And, as the slave departs, the man returns.

Oh! sacred Truth! thy triumph ceas'd a while,
And Hope, thy sister, ceas'd with thee to smile,
When leagu'd Oppression pour'd to Northern wars
Her whisker'd pandoors and her fierce hussars,
Wav'd her dread standard to the breeze of morn,

Peal'd her loud drum, and twang'd her trumpet horn
Tumultuous horror brooded o'er her van,
Presaging wrath to Poland—and to man![1]

Warsaw's last champion, from her height survey'd,
Wide o'er the fields, a waste of ruin laid,—
Oh! Heav'n! he cried, my bleeding country save!—
Is there no hand on high to shield the brave?
Yet, though destruction sweep these lovely plains,
Rise, fellow men! our country yet remains!
By that dread name, we wave the sword on high!
And swear for her to live!—with her to die!

He said, and on the rampart-heights array'd
His trusty warriors, few, but undismay'd;
Firm-pac'd and slow, a horrid front they form,

Still as the breeze, but dreadful as the storm;
Low, murm'ring sounds along their banners fly,
Revenge, or death,—the watchword and reply;
Then peal'd the notes, omnipotent to charm,
And the loud tocsin toll'd their last alarm!

In vain, alas! in vain, ye gallant few!
From rank to rank your volly'd thunder flew:—
Oh! bloodiest picture in the book of Time,
Sarmatia fell, unwept, without a crime;
Found not a generous friend, a pitying foe,
Strength in her arms, nor mercy in her woe!
Dropp'd from her nerveless grasp the shatter'd spear,
Clos'd her bright eye, and curb'd her high career;—
Hope, for a season, bade the world farewel,
And Freedom shriek'd—as Kosciusko fell!

The sun went down, nor ceas'd the carnage there;
Tumultuous murder shook the midnight air—
On Prague's proud arch the fires of ruin glow,
His blood-dy'd waters murm'ring far below;
The storm prevails, the rampart yields a way,
Bursts the wild cry of horror and dismay!
Hark! as the smouldering piles with thunder fall,
A thousand shrieks for hopeless mercy call!
Earth shook—red meteors flash'd along the sky,
And conscious Nature shudder'd at the cry!

Oh! righteous Heaven! ere Freedom found a grave,
Why slept the sword, omnipotent to save?
Where was thine arm, O Vengeance! where thy rod,
That smote the foes of Zion and of God,

That crush'd proud Ammon, when his iron car
Was yok'd in wrath, and thunder'd from afar,
Where was the storm that slumber'd till the host
Of blood-stain'd Pharaoh left their trembling coast;
Then bade the deep in wild commotion flow,
And heav'd an ocean on their march below?

Departed spirits of the mighty dead!
Ye that at Marathon and Leuctra bled!
Friends of the world! restore your swords to man,
Fight in his sacred cause, and lead the van!
Yet for Sarmatia's tears of blood atone,
And make her arm puissant as your own!
Oh! once again to Freedom's cause return
The patriot TELL—the BRUCE of BANNOCKBURN!

Yes! thy proud lords, unpitied land, shall see
That man hath yet a soul, and dare be free!
A little while, along thy saddening plains,
The starless night of desolation reigns;
Truth shall restore the light by Nature giv'n,
And, like Prometheus, bring the fire of Heav'n!
Prone to the dust Oppression shall be hurl'd,—
Her name, her nature, wither'd from the world!

Ye that the rising morn invidious mark,
And hate the light—because your deeds are dark;
Ye that expanding truth invidious view,
And think, or wish, the song of Hope untrue;
Perhaps your little hands presume to span
The march of Genius, and the pow'rs of man;

Perhaps ye watch, at Pride's unhallow'd shrine,
Her victims, newly slain, and thus divine:—
"Here shall thy triumph, Genius, cease, and here Truth, Science, Virtue, close your short career."

Tyrants! in vain ye trace the wizard ring;
In vain ye limit Mind's unwearied spring:
What! can ye lull the winged winds asleep,
Arrest the rolling world, or chain the deep?
No:—the wild wave contemns your scepter'd hand;—
It roll'd not back when Canute gave command!

Man! can thy doom no brighter soul allow?
Still must thou live a blot on Nature's brow?
Shall War's polluted banner ne'er be furl'd?
Shall crimes and tyrants cease but with the world?

What! are thy triumphs, sacred Truth, belied?
Why then hath Plato liv'd—or Sydney died?—

Ye fond adorers of departed fame,
Who warm at Scipio's worth, or Tully's name!
Ye that, in fancied vision, can admire
The sword of Brutus, and the Theban lyre!
Wrapt in historic ardour, who adore
Each classic haunt, and well-remember'd shore,
Where Valour tun'd, amid her chosen throng,
The Thracian trumpet and the Spartan song;
Or, wand'ring thence, behold the later charms
Of England's glory, and Helvetia's arms!
See Roman fire in Hampden's bosom swell,
And fate and freedom in the shaft of Tell!
Say, ye fond zealots to the worth of yor

Hath Valour left the world—to live no more?
No more shall Brutus bid a tyrant die,
And sternly smile with vengeance in his eye?
Hampden no more, when suffering freedom calls,
Encounter fate, and triumph as he falls?
Nor Tell disclose, through peril and alarm,
The might that slumbers in a peasant's arm?

Yes! in that generous cause, for ever strong,
The patriot's virtue, and the poet's song,
Still, as the tide of ages rolls away,
Shall charm the world, unconscious of decay!

Yes! there are hearts, prophetic Hope may trust,
That slumber yet in uncreated dust,

Ordain'd to fire th' adoring sons of earth
With every charm of wisdom and of worth;
Ordain'd to light, with intellectual day,
The mazy wheels of Nature as they play,
Or, warm with Fancy's energy, to glow,
And rival all but Shakspeare's name below!

And say, supernal Powers! who deeply scan
Heav'n's dark decrees, unfathom'd yet by man,
When shall the world call down, to cleanse her shame,
That embryo spirit, yet without a name,—
That friend of Nature, whose avenging hands
Shall burst the Libyan's adamantine bands?
Who, sternly marking on his native soil,
The blood, the tears, the anguish, and the toil,

Shall bid each righteous heart exult, to see
Peace to the slave, and vengeance on the free!

Yet, yet, degraded men! th' expected day
That breaks your bitter cup, is far away;
Trade, wealth, and fashion, ask you still to bleed,
And holy men give scripture for the deed;
Scourg'd and debas'd, no Briton stoops to save
A wretch, a coward; yes, because a slave!—

Eternal Nature! when thy giant hand
Had heav'd the floods, and fix'd the trembling land,
When life sprung startling at thy plastic call,
Endless her forms, and man the lord of all!
Say, was that lordly form inspir'd by thee,
To wear eternal chains, and bow the knee?

Was man ordain'd the slave of man to toil,
Yok'd with the brutes, and fetter'd to the soil;
Weigh'd in a tyrant's balance with his gold?
No!—Nature stamp'd us in a heav'nly mould!
She bade no wretch his thankless labour urge,
Nor, trembling, take the pittance and the scourge!
No homeless Libyan, on the stormy deep,
To call upon his country's name, and weep!—

Lo! once in triumph, on his boundless plain,
The quiver'd chief of Congo lov'd to reign;
With fires proportion'd to his native sky,
Strength in his arm, and lightning in his eye;
Scour'd with wild feet his sun-illumin'd zone,
The spear, the lion, and the woods his own;

Or led the combat, bold without a plan,
An artless savage, but a fearless man!

The plunderer came!—alas! no glory smiles
For Congo's chief on yonder Indian isles;
For ever fallen! no son of Nature now,
With freedom charter'd on his manly brow!
Faint, bleeding, bound, he weeps the night away,
And, when the sea-wind wafts the dewless day,
Starts, with a bursting heart, for evermore
To curse the sun that lights their guilty shore!

The shrill horn blew; at that alarum knell
His guardian angel took a last farewell!
That funeral dirge to darkness hath resign'd
The fiery grandeur of a generous mind!—

Poor fetter'd man! I hear thee whispering low
Unhallow'd vows to Guilt, the child of Woe!
Friendless thy heart; and canst thou harbour there
A wish but death—a passion but despair?

The widow'd Indian, when her lord expires,
Mounts the dread pile, and braves the funeral fires!
So falls the heart at Thraldom's bitter sigh!
So Virtue dies, the spouse of Liberty!

But not to Libya's barren climes alone,
To Chili, or the wild Siberian zone,
Belong the wretched heart and haggard eye,
Degraded worth, and poor misfortune's sigh!
Ye orient realms, where Ganges' waters run!
Prolific fields! dominions of the sun!

How long your tribes have trembled, and obey'd!
How long was Timur's iron sceptre sway'd!
Whose marshall'd hosts, the lions of the plain,
From Scythia's northern mountains to the main,
Rag'd o'er your plunder'd shrines and altars bare,
With blazing torch and gory scimitar,—
Stunn'd with the cries of death each gentle gale,
And bath'd in blood the verdure of the vale!
Yet could no pangs the immortal spirit tame,
When Brama's children perish'd for his name;
The martyr smil'd beneath avenging pow'r,
And brav'd the tyrant in his torturing hour!

When Europe sought your subject realms to gain,
And stretch'd her giant sceptre o'er the main,

Taught her proud barks the winding way to shape,
And brav'd the stormy spirit of the Cape;
Children of Brama! then was mercy nigh,
To wash the stain of blood's eternal dye?
Did Peace descend, to triumph and to save,
When free-born Britons cross'd the Indian wave?
Ah, no!—to more than Rome's ambition true,
The Nurse of Freedom gave it not to you!
She the bold route of Europe's guilt began,
And, in the march of nations, led the van!

Rich in the gems of India's gaudy zone,
And plunder pil'd from kingdoms not their own,
Degenerate trade! thy minions could despise
The heart-born anguish of a thousand cries;

Could lock, with impious hands, their teeming store,
While famish'd nations died along the shore;
Could mock the groans of fellow-men, and bear
The curse of kingdoms peopled with despair;
Could stamp disgrace on man's polluted name,
And barter, with their gold, eternal shame!

But hark! as bow'd to earth the bramin kneels,
From heav'nly climes propitious thunder peals!
Of India's fate her guardian spirits tell,
Prophetic murmurs breathing on the shell,
And solemn sounds that awe the list'ning mind,
Roll on the azure paths of every wind.

"Foes of mankind! (her guardian spirits say),
Revolving ages bring the bitter day,

When Heav'n's unerring arm shall fall on you,
And blood for blood these Indian plains bedew;
Nine times have Brama's wheels of lightning hurl'd
His awful presence o'er the alarmed world;
Nine times hath guilt, through all his giant frame,
Convulsive trembled, as the mighty came;
Nine times hath suffering Mercy spar'd in vain—
But Heav'n shall burst her starry gates again!
He comes! dread Brama shakes the sunless sky
With murmuring wrath, and thunders from on high!
Heaven's fiery horse, beneath his warrior form,
Paws the light clouds, and gallops on the storm!
Wide waves his flickering sword; his bright arms glow
Like summer suns, and light the world below;
Earth, and her trembling isles in Ocean's bed,
Are shook; and Nature rocks beneath his tread!

To pour redress on India's injur'd realm,
The oppressor to dethrone, the proud to whelm;
To chase destruction from her plunder'd shore,
With arts and arms that triumph'd once before,
The tenth Avatar comes! at Heav'n's command
Shall Seriswattee wave her hallow'd wand!
And Camdeo bright, and Ganesa sublime,[P]
Shall bless with joy their own propitious clime!
Come, Heav'nly Powers! primeval peace restore!
Love!—Mercy!—Wisdom!—rule for evermore!"

PLEASURES OF HOPE.

PART II.

Analysis of Part II.

Apostrophe to the power of Love....its intimate connection with generous and social Sensibility....allusion to that beautiful passage in the beginning of the book of Genesis, which represents the happiness of Paradise itself incomplete, till love was superadded to its other blessings....the dreams of future felicity which a lively imagination is apt to cherish, when Hope is animated by refined attachment....this disposition to combine, in one imaginary scene of residence, all that is pleasing in our estimate of happiness, compared to the skill of the great artist who personified perfect beauty, in the picture of Venus, by an assemblage of the most beautiful features he could find....a summer and winter evening described, as they may be supposed to arise in the mind of one who wishes, with enthusiasm, for the union of friendship and retirement.

Hope and Imagination inseparable agents....even in those contemplative moments when our imagination wanders beyond the boundaries of this world, our minds are not unattended with an impression that we shall some day have a wider and distinct prospect of the universe, instead of the partial glimpse we now enjoy.

The last and most sublime influence of Hope, is the concluding topic of the Poem....the predominance of a belief in a future state over the terrors attendant on dissolution.....the baneful influence of that sceptical philosophy which bars us from such comforts....allusion to the fate of a suicide....episode of Conrad and Ellenore....conclusion.

PLEASURES OF HOPE.

PART II.

In joyous youth, what soul hath never known
Thought, feeling, taste, harmonious to its own?
Who hath not paus'd while Beauty's pensive eye
Ask'd from his heart the homage of a sigh?
Who hath not own'd, with rapture-smitten frame,
The power of grace, the magic of a name?

There be, perhaps, who barren hearts avow,
Cold as the rocks on Torneo's hoary brow;

There be, whose loveless wisdom never fail'd,
In self-adoring pride securely mail'd:—
But, triumph not, ye peace-enamour'd few!
Fire, Nature, Genius, never dwelt with you!
For you no fancy consecrates the scene
Where rapture utter'd vows, and wept between;
'Tis yours, unmov'd, to sever and to meet;
No pledge is sacred, and no home is sweet!

Who that would ask a heart to dulness wed,
The waveless calm, the slumber of the dead?
No; the wild bliss of Nature needs alloy,
And fear and sorrow fan the fire of joy!
And say, without our hopes, without our fears,
Without the home that plighted love endears,

Without the smile from partial beauty won,
Oh! what were man?—a world without a sun!

Till Hymen brought his love-delighted hour,
There dwelt no joy in Eden's rosy bow'r!
In vain the viewless seraph ling'ring there,
At starry midnight charm'd the silent air;
In vain the wild-bird caroll'd on the steep,
To hail the sun, slow wheeling from the deep;
In vain, to soothe the solitary shade,
Aërial notes in mingling measure play'd;
The summer wind that shook the spangled tree,
The whispering way, the murmur of the bee;—
Still slowly pass'd the melancholy day,
And still the stranger wist not where to stray;—

The world was sad!—the garden was a wild!
And Man, the hermit, sigh'd—till Woman smil'd!

True, the sad power to generous hearts may bring
Delirious anguish on his fiery wing!
Barr'd from delight by Fate's untimely hand,
By wealthless lot, or pitiless command;
Or doom'd to gaze on beauties that adorn
The smile of triumph, or the frown of scorn;
While Memory watches o'er the sad review,
Of joys that faded like the morning dew;
Peace may depart—and life and nature seem
A barren path—a wildness, and a dream!

But can the noble mind for ever brood,
The willing victim of a weary mood,

On heartless cares that squander life away,
And cloud young Genius bright'ning into day
Shame to the coward thought that e'er betray'd
The noon of manhood to a myrtle shade![a]
If Hope's creative spirit cannot raise
One trophy sacred to thy future days,
Scorn the dull crowd that haunt the gloomy shrine
Of hopeless love to murmur and repine!
But, should a sigh of milder mood express
Thy heart-warm wishes, true to happiness,
Should Heav'n's fair harbinger delight to pour
Her blissful visions on thy pensive hour,
No tear to blot thy memory's pictur'd page,
No fears but such as fancy can assuage;
Though thy wild heart some hapless hour may miss
The peaceful tenor of unvaried bliss,

(For love pursues an ever devious race,
True to the winding lineaments of grace);
Yet still may Hope her talisman employ
To snatch from Heaven anticipated joy,
And all her kindred energies impart
That burn the brightest in the purest heart!

When first the Rhodian's mimic art array'd
The queen of Beauty in her Cyprian shade,
The happy master mingled on his piece
Each look that charm'd him in the fair of Greece;
To faultless Nature true, he stole a grace
From every finer form and sweeter face;
And, as he sojourn'd on the Ægean isles,
Woo'd all their love, and treasur'd all their smiles;
Then glow'd the tints, pure, precious, and refin'd,

And mortal charms seem'd heavenly when combin'd!
Love on the picture smil'd! Expression pour'd
Her mingling spirit there—and Greece ador'd!

So thy fair hand, enamour'd Fancy! gleans
The treasur'd pictures of a thousand scenes;
Thy pencil traces on the lover's thought
Some cottage-home, from towns and toil remote,
Where love and lore may claim alternate hours,
With Peace embosom'd in Idalian bow'rs!
Remote from busy Life's bewilder'd way,
O'er all his heart shall Taste and Beauty sway!
Free on the sunny slope, or winding shore,
With hermit steps, to wander and adore!
There shall he love, when genial morn appears,
Like pensive beauty smiling in her tears,

To watch the bright'ning roses of the sky,
And muse on Nature with a poet's eye!
And when the sun's last splendour lights the deep,
The woods, and waves, and murm'ring winds asleep,
When fairy harps th' Hesperian planet hail,
And the lone cuckoo sighs along the vale,
His paths shall be where streamy mountains swell
Their shadowy grandeur o'er the narrow dell,
Where mouldering piles and forests intervene,
Mingling with darker tints the living green;
No circling hills his ravish'd eye to bound,
Heaven, Earth, and Ocean, blazing all around.

The moon is up—the watch-tow'r dimly burns—
And down the vale his sober step returns;
But pauses oft, as winding rocks convey

The still sweet fall of music far away;
And oft he lingers from his home a while
To watch the dying notes!—and start, and smile!

Let Winter come! let polar spirits sweep
The dark'ning world, and tempest-troubled deep!
Though boundless snows the wither'd heath deform,
And the dim sun scarce wanders through the storm;
Yet shall the smile of social love repay,
With mental light, the melancholy day!
And, when its short and sullen noon is o'er,
The ice-chain'd waters slumbering on the shore,
How bright the faggots in his little hall
Blaze on the hearth, and warm the pictur'd wall!

How blest he names, in Love's familiar tone,
The kind fair friend, by Nature mark'd his own;

And, in the waveless mirror of his mind,
Views the fleet years of pleasure left behind,
Since Anna's empire o'er his heart began!
Since first he call'd her his before the holy man!

Trim the gay taper in his rustic dome,
And light the wintry paradise of home;
And let the half-uncurtain'd window hail
Some way-worn man benighted in the vale!
Now, while the moaning night-wind rages high,
As sweep the shot-stars down the troubled sky,
While fiery hosts in Heaven's wide circle play,
And bathe in lurid light the milky way,
Safe from the storm, the meteor, and the shower,
Some pleasing page shall charm the solemn hour—
With pathos shall command, with wit beguile,
A generous tear of anguish, or a smile—

'Thy woes, Arion! and thy simple tale,[b]
O'er all the heart shall triumph and prevail!
Charm'd as they read the verse too sadly true,
How gallant Albert, and his weary crew,
Heav'd all their guns, their foundering bark to save,
And toil'd—and shriek'd—and perish'd on the wave!

Yes, at the dead of night, by Lonna's steep,
The seaman's cry was heard along the deep;
There, on his funeral waters, dark and wild,
The dying father blest his darling child!
Oh! Mercy, shield her innocence, he cried,
Spent on the pray'r his bursting heart, and died!

Or will they learn how generous worth sublimes
The robber Moor,[c] and pleads for all his crimes!

How poor Amelia kiss'd, with many a tear,
His hand blood-stain'd, but ever ever dear!
Hung on the tortur'd bosom of her lord,
And wept, and pray'd perdition from his sword!
Nor sought in vain! at that heart-piercing cry,
The strings of nature crack'd with agony,
He, with delirious laugh, the dagger hurl'd,
And burst the ties that bound him to the world!

Turn from his dying words, that smite with steel
The shuddering thoughts, or wind them on the wheel—
Turn to the gentler melodies that suit
Thalia's harp, or Pan's Arcadian lute;
Or down the stream of Truth's historic page,
From clime to clime descend from age to age!

Yet there, perhaps, may darker scenes obtrude,
Than Fancy fashions in her wildest mood;
There shall he pause, with horrent brow, to rate
What millions died—that Cæsar might be great![d]
Or learn the fate that bleeding thousands bore,[e]
March'd by their Charles to Dneiper's swampy shore
Faint in his wounds, and shivering in the blast,
The Swedish soldier sunk—and groan'd his last!
File after file, the stormy showers benumb,
Freeze every standard-sheet, and hush the drum!
Horsemen and horse confess'd the bitter pang,
And arms and warriors fell with hollow clang!
Yet, ere he sunk in Nature's last repose,
Ere life's warm torrent to the fountain froze,
The dying man to Sweden turn'd his eye,
Thought of his home, and clos'd it with a sigh!

Imperial pride look'd sullen on his plight,
And Charles beheld—nor shudder'd at the sight!

Above, below, in Ocean, Earth, and Sky,
Thy fairy worlds, Imagination, lie,
And Hope attends, companion of the way,
Thy dream by night, thy visions of the day!
In yonder pensile orb, and every sphere
That gems the starry girdle of the year;
In those unmeasur'd worlds, she bids thee tell,
Pure from their God, created millions dwell,
Whose names and natures, unreveal'd below,
We yet shall learn, and wonder as we know;
For, as Ionia's saint, a giant form,
Thron'd on her tow'rs, conversing with the storm,
(When o'er each runic altar, weed-entwin'd,

The vesper clock tolls mournful to the wind),
Counts every wave-worn isle and mountain hoar,
From Kilda to the green Ierne's shore;
So, when thy pure and renovated mind
This perishable dust hath left behind,
Thy seraph eye shall count the starry train,
Like distant isles embosom'd in the main;
Rapt to the shrine where motion first began,
And light and life in mingling torrent ran;
From whence each bright rotundity was hurl'd,
The throne of God,—the centre of the world!

Oh! vainly wise, the moral Muse hath sung
That suasive Hope hath but a Syren tongue!
True; she may sport with life's untutor'd day,
Nor heed the solace of its last decay,

The guileless heart her happy mansion spurn,
And part, like Ajut—never to return![s]

But yet, methinks, when wisdom shall assuage
The grief and passions of our greener age,
Though dull the close of life, and far away
Each flow'r that hail'd the dawning of the day;
Yet o'er her lovely hopes, that once were dear,
The time-taught spirit, pensive, not severe,
With milder griefs her aged eye shall fill,
And weep their falsehood, though she love them s

Thus, with forgiving tears, and reconcil'd,
The king of Judah mourn'd his rebel child!
Musing on days, when yet the guiltless boy
Smil'd on his sire, and fill'd his heart with joy!

My Absalom! the voice of Nature cried!
Oh! that for thee thy father could have died!
For bloody was the deed, and rashly done,
That slew my Absalom!—my son!—my son!

Unfading Hope! when life's last embers burn,
When soul to soul, and dust to dust return!
Heav'n to thy charge resigns the awful hour!
Oh! then, thy kingdom comes! Immortal Power!
What though each spark of earth-born rapture fly,
The quivering lip, pale cheek, and closing eye!
Bright to the soul thy seraph hands convey
The morning dream of life's eternal day—
Then, then, the triumph and the trance begin!
And all the phœnix spirit burns within!

Oh! deep-enchanting prelude to repose,
The dawn of bliss, the twilight of our woes!
Yet half I hear the panting spirit sigh,
It is a dread and awful thing to die!
Mysterious worlds, untravell'd by the sun!
Where Time's far wand'ring tide has never run,
From your unfathom'd shades, and viewless spheres,
A warning comes, unheard by other ears.
'Tis Heav'n's commanding trumpet, long and loud,
Like Sinai's thunder, pealing from the cloud!
While Nature hears, with terror-mingled trust,
The shock that hurls her fabric to the dust;
And, like the trembling Hebrew, when he trod
The roaring waves, and call'd upon his God,
With mortal terrors clouds immortal bliss,
And shrieks, and hovers o'er the dark abyss

Daughter of Faith, awake, arise, illume
The dread unknown, the chaos of the tomb;
Melt and dispel, ye spectre-doubts, that roll
Cimmerian darkness on the parting soul!
Fly, like the moon-ey'd herald of dismay,
Chas'd on his night-steed by the star of day!
The strife is o'er—the pangs of nature close,
And life's last rapture triumphs o'er her woes.
Hark! as the spirit eyes, with eagle gaze,
The noon of Heav'n undazzl'd by the blaze,
On heav'nly winds that waft her to the sky,
Float the sweet tones of star-born melody:
Wild as that hallow'd anthem sent to hail
Bethlehem's shepherds in the lonely vale,
When Jordan hush'd his waves, and midnight still
Watch'd on the holy tow'rs of Zion hill!

Soul of the just! companion of the dead!
Where is thy home, and whither art thou fled!
Back to its heav'nly source thy being goes,
Swift as the comet wheels to whence he rose;
Doom'd on his airy path a while to burn,
And doom'd, like thee, to travel, and return.—
Hark! from the world's exploding centre driv'n
With sounds that shook the firmament of Heaven,
Careers the fiery giant, fast and far,
On bick'ring wheels, and adamantine car;
From planet whirl'd to planet more remote,
He visits realms beyond the reach of thought;
But, wheeling homeward, when his course is run!
Curbs the red yoke, and mingles with the sun!
So hath the traveller of earth unfurl'd
Her trembling wings, emerging from the world,

And o'er the path by mortal never trod,
Sprung to her source, the bosom of her God!

Oh! lives there, heaven! beneath thy dread expanse
One hopeless, dark idolater of Chance,
Content to feed, with pleasures unrefin'd,
The lukewarm passions of a lowly mind;
Who, mould'ring earthward, 'reft of every trust,
In joyless union wedded to the dust,
Could all his parting energy dismiss,
And call this barren world sufficient bliss?—
There live, alas! of heaven-directed mien,
Of cultur'd soul, and sapient eye serene,
Who hail thee, man! the pilgrim of a day,
Spouse of the worm, and brother of the clay!

Frail as the leaf in Autumn's yellow bower,
Dust in the wind, or dew upon the flower;
A friendless slave, a child without a sire,
Whose mortal life, and momentary fire,
Lights to the grave his chance-created form,
As ocean-wrecks illuminate the storm;
And, when the gun's tremendous flash is o'er,
To night and silence sink for ever more!—

Are these the pompous tidings ye proclaim,
Lights of the world, and demi-gods of Fame!
Is this your triumph—this your proud applause,
Children of Truth, and champions of her cause?
For this hath Science search'd, on weary wing,
By shore and sea, each mute and living thing?

Launch'd with Iberia's pilot from the steep,
To worlds unknown, and isles beyond the deep!
Or round the cope her living chariot driv'n,
And wheel'd in triumph through the signs of Heav'n?
Oh! star-ey'd Science, hast thou wander'd there,
To waft us home the message of despair?
Then bind the palm, thy sage's brow to suit,
Of blasted leaf, and death-distilling fruit!
Ah me! the laurel'd wreath that murder rears,
Blood-nurs'd, and water'd by the widow's tears,
Seems not so foul, so tainted, and so dread,
As waves the night-shade round the sceptic head.
What is the bigot's torch, the tyrant's chain?
I smile on death, if heav'n-ward Hope remain!
But, if the warring winds of Nature's strife
Be all the faithless charter of my life,

If Chance awak'd, inexorable power,
This frail and feverish being of an hour;
Doom'd o'er the world's precarious scene to sweep,
Swift as the tempest travels on the deep,
To know delight but by her parting smile,
And toil, and wish, and weep, a little while;
Then melt, ye elements, that form'd in vain
This troubled pulse, and visionary brain!
Fade, ye wild flowers, memorials of my doom,
And sink, ye stars, that light me to the tomb!
Truth, ever lovely—since the world began,
The foe of tyrants, and the friend of man,—
How can thy words from balmy slumber start,
Reposing Virtue, pillow'd on the heart!
Yet, if thy voice the note of thunder roll'd,
And that were true which Nature never told,

Let Wisdom smile not on her conquer'd field;
No rapture dawns, no treasure is reveal'd!
Oh! let her read, nor loudly, nor elate,
The doom that bars us from a better fate;
But, sad as angels for the good man's sin,
Weep to record, and blush to give it in!

And well may Doubt, the mother of Dismay,
Pause at her martyr's tomb, and read the lay.
Down by the wilds of yon deserted vale,
It darkly hints a melancholy tale!
There, as the homeless madman sits alone,
In hollow winds he hears a spirit moan!
And there, they say, a wizard orgie crowds,
When the Moon lights her watch-tower in the clouds.

Poor lost Alonzo! Fate's neglected child!
Mild be the doom of Heav'n—as thou wert mild!
For oh! thy heart in holy mould was cast,
And all thy deeds were blameless, but the last.
Poor lost Alonzo! still I seem to hear
The clod that struck thy hollow-sounding bier!
When Friendship paid, in speechless sorrow drown'd,
Thy midnight rites, but not on hallow'd ground!

Cease, every joy, to glimmer on my mind,
But leave—oh! leave, the light of Hope behind!
What though my winged hours of bliss have been,
Like angel-visits, few and far between!
Her musing mood shall every pang appease,
And charm—when pleasures lose the power to please!

Yes! let each rapture, dear to Nature, flee;
Close not the light of Fortune's stormy sea—
Mirth, music, friendship, Love's propitious smile,
Chase every care, and charm a little while,
Ecstatic throbs the fluttering heart employ,
And all her strings are harmoniz'd to joy!—
But why so short is Love's delighted hour?
Why fades the dew on Beauty's sweetest flow'r?
Why can no hymned charm of music heal
The sleepless woes impassion'd spirits feel?
Can Fancy's fairy hands no veil create,
To hide the sad realities of fate?—

No! not the quaint remark, the sapient rule,
Nor all the pride of Wisdom's worldly school,

Have pow'r to soothe, unaided and alone,
The heart that vibrates to a feeling tone!
When stepdame Nature every bliss recals,
Fleet as the meteor o'er the desert falls;
When, 'reft of all, yon widow'd sire appears
A lonely hermit in the vale of years;
Say, can the world one joyous thought bestow
To Friendship, weeping at the couch of Woe?
No! but a brighter soothes the last adieu,—
Souls of impassion'd mould, she speaks to you!
Weep not, she says, at Nature's transient pain,
Congenial spirits part to meet again!

What plaintive sobs thy filial spirit drew,
What sorrow chok'd thy long and last adieu:

Daughter of Conrad! when he heard his knell,
And bade his country and his child farewell!
Doom'd the long isles of Sydney cove to see,
The martyr of his crimes, but true to thee?
Thrice the sad father tore thee from his heart,
And thrice return'd, to bless thee, and to part;
Thrice from his trembling lips he murmur'd low
The plaint that own'd unutterable woe;
Till Faith, prevailing o'er his sullen doom,
As bursts the morn on night's unfathom'd gloom,
Lur'd his dim eye to deathless hopes sublime,
Beyond the realms of Nature, and of Time!

"And weep not thus," he cried, "young Ellenore,
My bosom bleeds, but soon shall bleed no more!

Short shall this half-extinguish'd spirit burn,
And soon these limbs to kindred dust return!
But not, my child, with life's precarious fire,
The immortal ties of nature shall expire;
These shall resist the triumph of decay,
When time is o'er, and worlds have pass'd away!
Cold in the dust this perish'd heart may lie,
But that which warm'd it once shall never die!
That spark unburied in its mortal frame,
With living light, eternal, and the same,
Shall beam on Joy's interminable years,
Unveil'd by darkness—unassuag'd by tears!

"Yet, on the barren shore and stormy deep,
One tedious watch is Conrad doom'd to weep;

But when I gain the home without a friend,
And press the uneasy couch where none attend,
This last embrace, still cherish'd in my heart,
Shall calm the struggling spirit ere it part!
Thy darling form shall seem to hover nigh,
And hush the groan of life's last agony!

"Farewel! when strangers lift thy father's bier,
And place my nameless stone without a tear;
When each returning pledge hath told my child
That Conrad's tomb is on the desert pil'd;
And when the dream of troubled fancy sees
Its lonely rank grass waving in the breeze;
Who then will soothe thy grief, when mine is o'er?
Who will protect thee, helpless Ellenore?

Shall secret scenes thy filial sorrows hide,
Scorn'd by the world, to factious guilt allied?
Ah! no; methinks the generous and the good
Will woo thee from the shades of solitude!
O'er friendless grief compassion shall awake,
And smile on Innocence, for Mercy's sake!"

Inspiring thought of rapture yet to be,
The tears of love were hopeless, but for thee!
If in that frame no deathless spirit dwell,
If that faint murmur be the last farewel!
If Fate unite the faithful but to part,
Why is their memory sacred to the heart?
Why does the brother of my childhood seem
Restor'd a while in every pleasing dream?

Why do I joy the lonely spot to view,
By artless friendship bless'd when life was new?

Eternal Hope! when yonder spheres sublime
Peal'd their first notes to sound the march of Time,
Thy joyous youth began—but not to fade.—
When all the sister planets have decay'd;
When wrapt in fire the realms of ether glow,
And Heaven's last thunder shakes the world below;
Thou, undismay'd, shalt o'er the ruins smile,
And light thy torch at Nature's funeral pile!

NOTES.

ON PART I.

NOTE a, p. 10.

And such thy strength-inspiring aid that bore

The hardy Byron to his native shore.

The following picture of his own distress, given by BYRON in his simple and interesting narrative, justifies the description in page 10.

After relating the barbarity of the Indian cacique to his child, he proceeds thus.—"A day or two after we put to "sea again, and crossed the great bay I mentioned we had "been at the bottom of when we first hauled away to the

"westward. The land here was very low and sandy, and "something like the mouth of a river, which discharged it- "self into the sea, and which had been taken no notice of "by us before, as it was so shallow that the Indians were "obliged to take every thing out of their canoes, and carry "it over land. We rowed up the river four or five leagues, "and then took into a branch of it that ran first to the "eastward, and then to the northward: here it became "much narrower, and the stream excessively rapid, so "that we gained but little way, though we wrought very "hard. At night we landed upon its banks, and had a "most uncomfortable lodging, it being a perfect swamp; "and we had nothing to cover us, though it rained exces- "sively. The Indians were little better off than we, as "there was no wood here to make their wigwams; so that "all they could do was to prop up the bark, which they "carry in the bottom of their canoes, and shelter them- "selves as well as they could to the leeward of it. Know- "ing the difficulties they had to encounter here, they had

" provided themselves with some seal; but we had not a " morsel to eat, after the heavy fatigues of the day, ex- " cepting a sort of root we saw the Indians make use of, " which was very disagreeable to the taste. We laboured " all next day against the stream, and fared as we had " done the day before. The next day brought us to the " carrying place. Here was plenty of wood, but nothing " to be got for sustenance. We passed this night as we had " frequently done, under a tree; but what we suffered at " this time is not easy to be expressed. I had been three " days at the oar, without any kind of nourishment except " the wretched root above mentioned. I had no shirt, for " it had rotted off by bits. All my clothes consisted of a " short grieko (something like a bear-skin), a piece of red " cloth which had once been a waistcoat, and a ragged pair " of trowsers, without shoes or stockings."

Or yield the lyre of Heav'n another string.

The seven strings of Apollo's harp were the symbolical representation of the seven planets. Herschel, by discovering an eighth, might be said to add another string to the instrument.

Deep from his vaults, the Loxian murmurs flow.

Loxias is a name frequently given to Apollo by Greek writers: it is met with more than once in the Chœphoræ of Æschylus.

Wild Obi flies.

Among the negroes of the West Indies, Obi, or Obiah, is the name of a magical power, which is believed by them to affect the object of its malignity with dismal calamities.

Such a belief must undoubtedly have been deduced from the superstitious mythology of their kinsmen on the coast of Africa. I have therefore personified Obi as the evil spirit of the African, although the history of the African tribes mentions the evil spirits of their religious creed by a different appellation.

Presaging wrath to Poland—and to man!

The history of the partition of Poland, of the massacre in the suburbs of Warsaw, and on the bridge of Prague, the triumphant entry of Suwarrow into the Polish capital, and the insult offered to human nature, by the blasphemous thanks offered up to Heaven, for victories obtained over men fighting in the sacred cause of liberty, by murderers and oppressors, are events generally known.

The shrill horn blew.

The negroes in the West Indies are summoned to their morning work by a shell or horn.

NOTE l, p. 41.

How long was Timur's iron sceptre sway'd?

To elucidate this passage, I shall subjoin a quotation from the preface to Letters from a Hindoo Rajah, a work of elegance and celebrity.

" The impostor of Mecca had established, as one of the " principles of his doctrine, the merit of extending it, " either by persuasion or the sword, to all parts of the " earth. How steadily this injunction was adhered to by " his followers, and with what success it was pursued, is " well known to all who are in the least conversant in his- " tory.

" The same overwhelming torrent which had inundated " the greater part of Africa, burst its way into the very " heart of Europe, and covered many kingdoms of Asia " with unbounded desolation, directed its baneful course to " the flourishing provinces of Hindostan. Here these " fierce and hardy adventurers, whose only improvement " had been in the science of destruction, who added the " fury of fanaticism to the ravages of war, found the great " end of their conquests opposed, by objects which neither " the ardour of their persevering zeal, nor savage bar- " barity, could surmount. Multitudes were sacrificed by " the cruel hand of religious persecution, and whole coun-

"tries were deluged in blood, in the vain hope, that by "the destruction of a part, the remainder might be per- "suaded, or terrified, into the profession of Mahomedism; "but all these sanguinary effects were ineffectual; and at "length, being fully convinced, that though they might "extirpate, they could never hope to convert, any number "of the Hindoos, they relinquished the impracticable idea, "with which they had entered upon their career of con- "quest, and contented themselves with the acquirement of "the civil dominion and almost universal empire of Hin- "dostan."———Letters from a Hindoo Rajah, by ELIZA HAMILTON.

While famish'd nations died along the shore.

The following account of British conduct, and its consequences, in Bengal, will afford a sufficient idea of the fact alluded to in this passage.

After describing the monopoly of salt, betel nut, and tobacco, the historian proceeds thus.—"Money in this current came but by drops; it could not quench the thirst "of those who waited in India to receive it. An expedi- "ent, such as it was, remained to quicken its pace. The "natives could live with little salt, but could not want "food. Some of the agents saw themselves well situated "for collecting the rice into stores; they did so. They "knew the Gentoos would rather die than violate the prin- "ciples of their religion by eating flesh. The alternative "would therefore be between giving what they had, or "dying. The inhabitants sunk;—they that cultivated the "land, and saw the harvest at the disposal of others,

"planted in doubt—scarcity ensued. Then the monopoly "was easier managed—sickness ensued. In some districts "the languid living left the bodies of their numerous dead "unburied."———Short History of the English transactions in the East Indies, page 145.

NOTE o, p. 44.

Nine times have Brama's wheels of lightning hurl'd
His awful presence o'er the alarmed world.

Among the sublime fictions of the Hindoo mythology, it is one article of belief, that the deity Brama has descended nine times upon the world in various forms, and that he is yet to appear a tenth time, in the figure of a warrior upon a white horse, to cut off all incorrigible offenders. Avatar is the word used to express his descent.

And Camdeo bright, and Ganesa sublime—

Camdeo is the God of Love in the mythology of the Hindoos. Ganesa and Seriswattee correspond to the pagan deities Janus and Minerva.

"and ventured to make long marches during this mortal "cold. It was in one of these marches that two thousand "men fell down dead with cold before his eyes."

Medea, v. 194. p. 93, Glasg. edit.

TELL me, ye bards, whose skill sublime
First charm'd the ear of youthful Time,
With numbers wrapt in heav'nly fire,
Who bade delighted Echo swell.

The trembling transports of the lyre,
The murmur of the shell—
Why to the burst of Joy alone
Accords sweet Music's soothing tone?

Why can no bard, with magic strain
In slumbers steep the heart of pain?
While varied tones obey your sweep,
The mild, the plaintive, and the deep,
Bends not despairing Grief to hear
Your golden lute, with ravish'd ear?
Oh! has your sweetest shell no power to bind
The fiercer pangs that shake the mind,
And lull the wrath at whose command
Murder bares her gory hand?
When flush'd with joy, the rosy throng
Weave the light dance, ye swell the song!
Cease, ye vain warblers! cease to charm
The breast with other raptures warm!
Cease! till your hand with magic strain

SPEECH OF THE CHORUS IN THE SAME TRAGEDY,

TO DISSUADE MEDEA FROM HER PURPOSE OF PUTTING HER CHILDREN TO DEATH, AND FLYING FOR PROTECTION TO ATHENS.

O HAGGARD queen! to Athens dost thou guide
Thy glowing chariot, steep'd in kindred gore;
Or seek to hide thy damned parricide,
Where Peace and Mercy dwell for evermore?

The land where Truth, pure, precious, and sublime,
Woos the deep silence of sequester'd bowers,
And warriors, matchless since the first of Time,
Rear their bright banners o'er unconquer'd towers!

Where joyous youth, to Music's mellow strain,
Twines in the dance with nymphs for ever fair,
While Spring eternal, on the lilied plain,
Waves amber radiance through the fields of air!

The tuneful Nine (so sacred legends tell)
First wak'd their heavenly lyre these scenes among;
Still in your green-wood bowers they love to dwell;
Still in your vales they swell the choral song!

But there the tuneful, chaste, Pierian fair,
The guardian nymphs of green Parnassus, now
Sprung from Harmonia, while her graceful hair
Wav'd in bright auburn o'er her polish'd brow,

ANTISTROPHE I.

Where silent vales, and glades of green array,
The murm'ring wreaths of cool Cephisus lavĕ,
There, as the Muse hath sung, at noon of day,
The Queen of Beauty bow'd to taste the wave;

And blest the stream, and breath'd across the land,
The soft sweet gale that fans fon summer bowers;
And there the sister Loves, a smiling band,
Crown'd with the fragrant wreaths of rosy flowers!

"And go," she cries, "in yonder valleys rove,
With Beauty's torch the solemn scenes illume;
Wake in each eye the radiant light of Love,
Breathe on each cheek young Passion's tender bloom!

"Entwine, with myrtle chains, your soft control,
To sway the hearts of Freedom's darling kind!
With glowing charms enrapture Wisdom's soul,
And mould to grace ethereal Virtue's mind."

STROPHE II.

The land where Heaven's own hallow'd waters ply,
Where Friendship binds the generous and the good,
Say, shall it hail thee from thy frantic way,
Unholy woman! with thy hands embrued

In thine own children's gore? Oh! ere they bleed,
Let Nature's voice thy ruthless heart appal!
Pause at the bold, irrevocable deed—
The mother strikes—the guiltless babes shall fall!

Think what remorse thy maddening thoughts shall sting,
When dying pangs their gentle bosoms tear!
Where shalt thou sink, when ling'ring echoes ring
The screams of horror in thy tortur'd ear?

No! let thy bosom melt to Pity's cry,—
In dust we kneel—by sacred Heaven implore—
O! stop thy lifted arm, ere yet they die,
Nor dip thy horrid hands in infant gore!

ANTISTROPHE II.

Say, how shalt thou that barb'rous soul assume,
Undamp'd by horror at the daring plan?
Hast thou a heart to work thy children's doom!
Or hands to finish what thy wrath began?

When o'er each babe you look a last adieu,
And gaze on Innocence, that smiles asleep,
Shall no fond feeling beat, to nature true,
Charm thee to pensive thought—and bid thee weep?

When the young suppliants clasp their parent dear,
Heave the deep sob, and pour the artless prayer,—
Aye! thou shalt melt;—and many a heart-shed tear
Gush o'er the harden'd features of despair!

Nature shall throb in every tender string,—
Thy trembling heart the ruffian's task deny;
Thy horror-smitten hands afar shall fling
The blade, undrench'd in blood's eternal dye!

CHORUS.

Hallow'd Earth! with indignation
Mark, oh, mark the murd'rous deed!
Radiant eye of wide creation,
Watch the damned parricide!

Yet ere Colchia's rugged daughter
Perpetrate the dire design,
And consign to kindred slaughter
Children of thy golden line!

Shall the hand, with murder gory,
Cause immortal blood to flow?
Sun of Heav'n!—array'd in glory!
Rise,—forbid,—avert the blow!

In the vales of placid gladness
Let no rueful maniac range;
Chase afar the fiend of Madness,
Wrest the dagger from Revenge!

Say, hast thou, with kind protection,
Rear'd thy smiling race in vain;
Fost'ring Nature's fond affection,
Tender cares, and pleasing pain?

Hast thou, on the troubled ocean,
Brav'd the tempest loud and strong,
Where the waves, in wild commotion,
Roar Cyanean rocks among?

Didst thou roam the paths of danger,
Hymenean joys to prove?
Spare, O sanguinary stranger,
Pledges of thy sacred love.

Shall not Heaven, with indignation,
Watch thee o'er the barb'rous deed?
Shalt thou cleanse, with expiation,
Monstrous, murd'rous, parricide?

LOVE AND MADNESS.

AN ELEGY.

LOVE AND MADNESS.

AN ELEGY,

Written in 1795.

HARK! from the battlements of yonder tower *
The solemn bell has toll'd the midnight hour!
Rous'd from drear visions of distemper'd sleep,
Poor B——k wakes—in solitude to weep!

"Cease, Mem'ry, cease (the friendless mourner cried)
To probe the bosom too severely tried!
Oh! ever cease, my pensive thoughts, to stray
Through the bright fields of Fortune's better day,

* Warwick castle.

When youthful Hope, the music of the mind,
Tun'd all its charms, and E——n was kind!

"Yet, can I cease, while glows this trembling frame,
In sighs to speak thy melancholy name?
I hear thy spirit wail in every storm!
In midnight shades I view thy passing form!
Pale as in that sad hour, when doom'd to feel,
Deep in thy perjur'd heart, the bloody steel!

"Demons of Vengeance! ye at whose command
I grasp'd the sword with more than woman's hand,
Say ye, did Pity's trembling voice controul,
Or Horror damp the purpose of my soul!
No! my wild heart sat smiling o'er the plan,
Till Hate fulfill'd what baffled Love began!

"Yes; let the clay-cold breast, that never knew
One tender pang to generous Nature true,
Half-mingling pity with the gall of scorn,
Condemn this heart, that bled in love forlorn!

"And ye, proud fair, whose soul no gladness warms,
Save Rapture's homage to your conscious charms!
Delighted idols of a gaudy train!
Ill can your blunter feelings guess the pain,
When the fond faithful heart, inspir'd to prove
Friendship refin'd, the calm delight of love,
Feels all its tender strings with anguish torn,
And bleeds at perjur'd Pride's inhuman scorn!

"Say, then, did pitying Heav'n condemn the deed,
When Vengeance bade thee, faithless lover! bleed?

Long had I watch'd thy dark foreboding brow,
What time thy bosom scorn'd its dearest vow!
Sad, though I wept the friend, the lover chang'd,
Still thy cold look was scornful and estrang'd,
Till from thy pity, love, and shelter, thrown,
I wander'd, hopeless, friendless, and alone!

"Oh! righteous Heav'n! 'twas then my tortur'd soul
First gave to wrath unlimited controul!
Adieu the silent look! the streaming eye!
The murmur'd plaint! the deep heart-heaving sigh!
Long slumb'ring Vengeance wakes to better deeds;
He shrieks, he falls, the perjur'd lover bleeds!
Now the last laugh of agony is o'er,
And pale in blood he sleeps, to wake no more!

"'Tis done! the flame of hate no longer burns;
Nature relents, but, ah! too late returns!
Why does my soul this gush of fondness feel?
Trembling and faint, I drop the guilty steel!
Cold on my heart the hand of terror lies,
And shades of horror close my languid eyes!

"Oh! 'twas a deed of Murder's deepest grain!
Could B———k's soul so true to wrath remain?
A friend long true, a once fond lover fell!—
Where love was foster'd, could not Pity dwell?

"Unhappy youth! while yon pale crescent glows,
To watch on silent Nature's deep repose,
Thy sleepless spirit, breathing from the tomb,
Foretels my fate, and summons me to come!

Once more I see thy sheeted spectre stand,
Roll the dim eye, and wave the paly hand!

"Soon may this fluttering spark of vital flame
Forsake its languid melancholy frame!
Soon may these eyes their trembling lustre close,
Welcome the dreamless night of long repose!
Soon may this woe-worn spirit seek the bourne,
Where, lull'd to slumber, Grief forgets to mourn!"

SONGS.

THE WOUNDED HUSSAR.

ALONE to the banks of the dark-rolling Danube
Fair Adelaide hied when the battle was o'er:
Oh whither, she cried, hast thou wander'd, my lover;
Or here dost thou welter, and bleed on the shore?

What voice did I hear? 'twas my Henry that sigh'd!
All mournful she hasten'd, nor wander'd she far,
When bleeding, and low, on the heath she descried,
By the light of the moon, her poor wounded Hussar!

From his bosom that heav'd, the last torrent was streaming,
And pale was his visage, deep-mark'd with a scar;
And dim was that eye, once expressively beaming,
That melted in love, and that kindled in war!

How smit was poor Adelaide's heart at the sight!
How bitter she wept o'er the victim of war!
Hast thou come, my fond Love, this last sorrowful night,
To cheer the lone heart of your wounded Hussar?

Thou shalt live, she replied; Heav'n's mercy, relieving
Each anguishing wound, shall forbid me to mourn!
Ah, no! the last pang in my bosom is heaving!
No light of the morn shall to Henry return!

Thou charmer of life, ever tender and true!
Ye babes of my love, that await me afar!—
His faltering tongue scarce could murmur adieu,
When he sunk in her arms—the poor wounded Hussar!

GILDEROY.

The last, the fatal hour is come,
That bears my love from me:
I hear the dead note of the drum,
I mark the gallows tree!

The bell has toll'd; it shakes my heart;
The trumpet speaks thy name;
And must my Gilderoy depart,
To bear a death of shame?

No bosom trembles for thy doom;
No mourner wipes a tear
The gallows' foot is all thy tomb,
The sledge is all thy bier!

Oh, Gilderoy! bethought we then
So soon, so sad, to part,
When first, in Roslin's lovely glen,
You triumph'd o'er my heart?

Your locks they glitter'd to the sheen,
Your hunter garb was trim;
And graceful was the ribbon green
That bound your manly limb!

Ah! little thought I to deplore
These limbs in fetters bound;
Or hear, upon thy scaffold floor,
The midnight hammer sound.

Ye cruel, cruel, that combin'd
The guiltless to pursue;
My Gilderoy was ever kind,
He could not injure you!

A long adieu! but where shall fly
Thy widow all forlorn,
When every mean and cruel eye
Regards my woe with scorn?

Yes! they will mock thy widow's tears,
And hate thine orphan boy;
Alas! his infant beauty wears
The form of Gilderoy!

Then will I seek the dreary mound
That hides one mouldering clay;
And weep and linger on the ground,
And sigh my heart away!

THE HARPER

On the green banks of Shannon, when Sheelah was nigh
No blithe Irish lad was so happy as I;
No harp like my own could so cheerily play,
And wherever I went, was my poor dog Tray.

When at last I was forc'd from my Sheelah to part
She said, (while the sorrow was big at her heart,
Oh! remember your Sheelah when far far away;
And be kind, my dear Pat, to our poor dog Tray.

Poor dog! he was faithful and kind, to be sure,
And he constantly lov'd me, although I was poor;
When the sour-looking folks sent me heartless away,
I had always a friend in my poor dog Tray.

When the road was so dark, and the night was so cold,
And Pat and his dog were grown weary and old,
How snugly we slept in my old coat of grey,
And he lick'd me for kindness—my poor dog Tray.

Though my wallet was scant, I remember'd his case,
Nor refus'd my last crust to his pitiful face;
But he died at my feet, on a cold winter day,
And I play'd a sad lament for my poor dog Tray.

Where now shall I go, poor, forsaken, and blind?
Can I find one to guide me, so faithful and kind?
To my sweet native village, so far, far away,
I can never more return with poor dog Tray.

POETICAL TRANSLATIONS, containing Francis' Horace, Garth's Ovid, and Lewis' Statius, elegantly printed on a London type, 1 vol. royal 8vo.—Price 1l. 1s. boards.

2.

HOME, a POEM, 1 vol. foolscap 8vo, 2d edit. Corrected and enlarged.—Price 6s. boards.

" O quid solutis est beatius curis !
" Cum mens onus reponit, ac peregrino
" Labore fessi venimus larem ad nostrum,
" Desideratoque acquiescimus lecto."—CATULL.

" This is a delightful poem, and well deserves our most distinguished commendation. The writer, in spirited and harmonious verses, represents all the various images which the imagination can connect with the subject. Some beautiful episodes are also introduced. It is only necessary to insert the following apostrophe to justify all that has been said. Still happier specimens might have been found; parts of this are requisite. We have not lately met with so agreeable and so interesting a poem."—British Critic, July 1806.

"The versification is indeed uncommonly beautiful, and for the most part is perfectly correct and harmonious. The author's sentiments are very commendable; he seems to entertain much more just ideas of man, and the progress of society, than is usualy met with among poets."—Literary Journal, June 1806.

VERSES, SOCIAL and DOMESTIC, by George Hay Drummond, A.M. small 8vo.—Price 7s. boards.

"The highly accomplished and respectable author has with great diffidence entitled his publication Verses: but these verses are derived from a higher lineage than many poems of far prouder boast. They are highly finished miniature representations of domestic life, at various seasons, and deserve to be placed as cabinet pictures in every family apartment.

"We should delight in selecting much from this estimable assemblage of Poetic Graces, did our space allow us the gratification; but we must restrict ourselves to the scanty limits of a sonnet-extract, amid many more extended attractions. Yet we ought not to close this brief report, without expressing our cordial conviction, that if suavity of sentiment, or elegance of expression, should allure the reader to peruse these polished strains with the attention which they merit, such a reader must be highly profited, as well as pleased by the employ."—Monthly Mirror for June 1802.

"The Verses display in general a mind of elegant turn, long habituated to the association of poetical images, and sufficiently exercised in the construction of harmonious measure. There are few Poems which we might not produce as specimens, without any injustice to the Author."—British Critic for August 1802.

SCOTTISH DESCRIPTIVE POEMS, with some Illustrations of Scottish Literary Antiquities, small 8vo.—Price 7s. boards.

This Volume contains,

I. The CLYDE, a Poem, in two parts, by John Wilson, late master of the Grammar School at Greenock; with the Life of the Author, and Notes and Illustrations by the Editor.

II. ALBANIA, a Poem, addressed to the Genius of Scotland, by a Scots Clergyman; with Preliminary Remarks and Additional Notes by the Editor.

III. The DAY ESTIVAL, a Poem, by Alexander Hume; with Preliminary Observations and Notes by the Editor, consisting of Extracts from Bishop Carswell's Foirm na Nurrnuidheadh, or Form of Prayer, 1567, in Gaelic and English, chiefly concerning the Ancient Bards and Poetry of the Scottish Highlanders.

IV. POEMS, by William Fowler; with Preliminary Observations by the Editor.

The POETICAL WORKS of Hector Macniel, Esq. 2 vols. foolscap 8vo, second edition.—12s. boards.

"In these volumes we find several songs in the Scottish manner and dialect, which are in general written with great taste, simplicity, and delicacy. In these compositions Mr. Macniel excels all his predecessors, the Ayrshire ploughman excepted, with whom, nevertheless, he may stand a comparison. In his Epistle to C. L. and in several other poems, our author shews a very happy vein of humour, more correct, and scarcely less poignant, than that of Burns. In his Links o' Forth and his Scottish Muse, he challenges a still more direct comparison with that powerful genius. The quotations we have given, and several of Mr. Macniel's other Poems, particularly his Ode to Grandeur, and his verses on the death of Sir Ralph Abercrombie, shew considerable strength and elevation of fancy. But tenderness, delicacy, and sensibility, are the most striking characteristics of his muse. He is everywhere true to nature and passion, and touches with a skilful hand the finest chords of the heart. As a moral writer, he is without a stain,—uniformly faithful to the cause of innocence and the interests of virtue. We should be happy if we could anticipate the vein of posterity, and breathe into the ear of the living poet those grateful accents with which future generations will hallow his dust."—Critical Review, March 1802.

"It is with the greatest pleasure, that we have seen, in two octavo volumes, a collection of 'the Poetical Works of Hector Macniel, Esq.' With several of these poems the public is intimately acquainted. Who has not melted at the pathetic 'History of Will and Jean,' and the 'Waes o' War?' The greater number of these elegant effusions are in the Scottish dialogue; they are more classical and correct than those of Burns, and rival the productions of that wonderful genius, in richness of fancy, simplicity, and pathos."—Supplement Monthly Magazine, July 1802.

POEMS and PLAYS, by William Richardson, A. M. Professor of Humanity in the University of Glasgow. Two vols. foolscap 8vo.—Price 10s. 6d.

"There are in these volumes several beautiful descriptions, which carry the reader's imagination directly into enchanting scenes and interesting situations. But in general, the author addresses the powers of sensibility, not by a copious enumeration and detail of circumstances, but by exhibiting to the fancy a few leading points, which, by necessary implication, immediately call into view all the minor parts of the subject. He endeavours not so much to tell what nature is, as to awaken those feelings and emotions, which nature, in her fairest forms, is calculated to excite."—"Of this necessary information, Professor Richardson appears to be completely master; for in the choice of his embellishments and accessary ideas, together with all the circumstances of time, place, scenery, and versification, he uniformly employs those which are suitable to that state of mind to which his composition is addressed."

"In both his plays, Professor Richardson has founded his claims to praise upon intrinsic merit; never having recourse to the hackneyed, but common expedient of making up for the want of poetry by the rapid change of scenery, gorgeous trappings, and some other ingredients of stage effect."

"The poetry of the Professor is, as our readers must have observed, soft, elegant, and spirited. His sentiments are delicate, and always expressed in appropriate language. His embellishments are rich and varied, selected with the eye of a critic, from the wide range of external nature. There is another praise due to our author, and it is not the meanest commendation that can be conferred upon a modern poet, for having uniformly employed all the inducements of his enchanting art, on the side of virtue." Anti-Jacobin Rev. April, 1808.

The SELECT WORKS of HENRY FIELDING, Esq. (uniformly printed with, and designed to accompany, Anderson's edition of Smollett's Miscellaneous Works), containing,

Joseph Andrews,
Tom Jones, or the History of a Foundling,
Amelia, and Jonathan Wild.

The distinguished merit of Fielding has always procured for his works a circulation, fully as general and extensive as the production of any other author in the English language have ever obtained. The most valuable part of his works have, indeed, been so often and so variously printed, that any new edition of them, at present, may appear to be almost unnecessary. But in the numberless editions of his detached works, from the dissimilarity of form, there is now considerable difficulty in finding what is valuable among the literary remains of Fielding, exhibited in a manner at once creditable to his talents, and agreeable to his admirers.

The success which Dr. Anderson's collection of the Miscellaneous Works of Smollett has met with, has induced the Publishers to offer The Select Works of Fielding, printed in an uniform manner. In making this selection, they have been guided by the public judgment alone. The Dramatic Works of Fielding, which are now almost unknown, they have not attempted to recal from oblivion. Nor have they brought forward such of his performances as, from various causes, could have been interesting only at the period at which they were written. They have, in short, presented to the Public, under the name of Select Works, no more than what have long and universally received the fullest approbation and which, it may confidently be said, will be transmitted with undiminished admiration to the latest posterity.

For this edition of the Select Works of Fielding, a Life of the Author has now, for the first time, been written,—no Biographer of Fielding having yet appeared, if we except Mr. Murphy, whose Essay on his life and genius was composed for an edition of his works published in 1762, and, as he himself says, was never intended as a performance in which the strict rules of biography were to be observed.

MEMOIRS of MARMONTEL, written by himself; including ANECDOTES of the most distinguished literary and political characters who appeared in France during the last century. Translated from the French, with Notes and Illustrations, by the Author of the Swiss Emigrants, 4 vols 12mo.—Price 1l. 1s. boards.

"This is one of the most interesting productions which has issued from the French press, since the commencement of the Revolution. To a narrative of the private life of an estimable writer, is added a view of the brilliant literary societies of Paris before the close of the French monarchy, and of the first scenes of that awful tragedy, which Europe still contemplates as it proceeds, with increasing apprehension. The style of the work is also not less attractive than its matter: it is eloquent, flowing, and easily declines, in pursuing the course of events, either to the ludicrous or the pathetic."—Monthly Review, November 1805.

"We are not sure that we have perused any book, since the commencement of our critical career, that has afforded us more entertainment than those little volumes. The narrative is, upon the whole, so gay and airy, the tone of sentiment so mild and unassuming, and the living pictures with which the busiest part of the scene is crowded, so full of delicacy, truth, and vivacity, that it is impossible not to be charmed with the greater part of the performance."—Edinburgh Review, January 1807.

 To this translation is prefixed, a rapid sketch of French manners, particularly those of the literary and fashionable circles, in which this celebrated author spent most part of his life. As those manners differ greatly from such as prevail in Britain, the reader will thus be enabled to understand some passages which might otherwise appear unaccountable. This sketch, with the notes which are added, relative to some characters and occurrences not generally known, will render the narrative on the whole still more interesting.

With regard to the translation itself, every attention has been paid, not only to render it correct and faithful, but also to preserve, as much as possible, the spirit and beauty of the admired original.

The FABLE of the BEES; or, PRIVATE VICES, PUBLIC BENEFITS. With an ESSAY on CHARITY and CHARITY SCHOOLS, and a Search into the NATURE of SOCIETY. Also, a Vindication of the Book from the Aspersions contained in a Presentment of the Grand Jury of Middlesex, and an abusive Letter to Lord C——.

"It was Dr. Mandeville who seems to have been at the bottom of all that has been written on this subject, (National Economy), either by Dr. Smith or the French Economists:—That national wealth consists in industry, excited by necessity, natural or luxurious; that the value and perfection of all the subjects of industry depend chiefly on the division of labour; that certain labours or employments are productive, and others unproductive; that it is mechanics or ploughmen that are demanded for national wealth, not men addicted to books, who often tend to make the poorer classes idle, vain, and discontented; that the value of articles depends on their scarcity and plenty. These are the leading principles in Dr. Mandeville's Fable of the Bees. Let any man of candour and common understanding peruse the Fable of the Bees, and the innumerable publications of the Economists, and then say, whether it be not almost certain, that the way was prepared for the inquiries and conclusions of the latter by those of the former. The introduction of the Fable of the Bees into France coincides with the time when the Economists received the impressions of education. As the just mode of investigation in natural philosophy was invented by Englishmen, so also the just mode of investigation in political economy, how to make a people powerful and happy, the most important of all the subjects of reasoning, was also first pointed out by an Englishman. Bacon and Newton were the fathers of legitimate inquiry in natural, and Mandeville in political philosophy. It is not a little astonishing, that the honour due, on this score, to Mandeville, has not been reclaimed before by his countrymen."—Anti-Jacobin Review, Dec. 1805.

An INQUIRY into the NATURE and CAUSES of the WEALTH of NATIONS, by Adam Smith, L. L. D. F. R. S. with a Life of the Author, 3 vols. 8vo. 1l. 1s. boards.

For this edition an Account of the Life of the Author has been drawn up; and although it cannot be said that any facts relating to that truly great man are given, in addition to those which have already appeared, yet a more satisfactory account, it is presumed, will now be found of his Studies and Doctrines, than has been perfixed to any other edition of the Wealth of Nations.

There are likewise perfixed, a Comparative View of the Doctrines of Smith and the French Economists, and a method of facilitating the Study of Mr. Smith's Inquiry, by Germain Garnier, of the National Institute, translator of this work into the French language.

The advantage of some directions to the readers of this immortal work, as it has justly been called, particularly to those who have not previously made the science of Political Economy their study, has been generally acknowledged. The following Observations are extracted from a review of Garnier's Translation.

"M. Garnier, in order to facilitate the understanding of his author, has laid down the heads of the work in the order in which he conceives they ought to have been treated; and, no doubt, had the course now sketched been followed by Dr. Smith, his book would have been read with more pleasure and interest, and his doctrines would have been more easily apprehended. We are of opinion, therefore, that the arrangement here given, or something on the same plan, might be advantageously perfixed to a future edition of the original."—App. to Monthly Review, 1802.

The THEORY of MORAL SENTIMENTS; or, An ESSAY towards an Analysis of the Principles by which men naturally judge concerning the conduct and character, first of their neighbours, and afterwards of themselves. FERGUSON's LECTURES on SELECT SUBJECTS, in MECHANICS, HYDROSTATICS, HYDRAULICS, PNEUMATICS, OPTICS, GEOGRAPHY, ASTRONOMY, and DIALING, with Notes and an Appendix, adapted to the present state of the Arts and Sciences, by David Brewster, L. L. D. the second edition, corrected and enlarged, 2 vols. 8vo. with a volume of plates. —1l. 5s, boards.

The following commendations of the first edition of this work are respectfully submitted to the Public.

"The Author of the Lectures, of which a corrected and enlarged edition is now offered to the Public, has obtained a deserved reputation for composing familiar treatises on Philosophical and Mechanical topics, in a manly, though artless style. This improved edition, of one of his most esteemed performances, is undertaken by a gentleman, who, to Ferguson's talents for plain distinct description, has added such a competent share of mathematical acquirements, as is likely to keep him from erroneous principles or inaccurate results."

"Mr. Brewster's Appendix contains much useful information under the different heads of Mechanics, Hydraulics, Optics, Dialing, and Astronomy. Nearly one hundred pages are devoted to the subject of Water-mills and Wind-mills, in which many of Mr. Brewster's rules and observations cannot fail to be beneficial to the Mill-wright.

"There are three articles in this Appendix which it would be unjust not to mention with commendation: they treat of the Steam Engine, the method of grinding and polishing Lenses, and the method of casting, grinding, and polishing, the mirrors of Reflecting Telescopes. The description of Watt's Steam Engine, though concise, is very perspicuous; the engraved representation of this Steam Engine, with the latest improvements, will be found highly useful, and conveys a better idea of the Engine as a whole, than any thing we have yet met with.

"Altogether this work may be safely recommended as presenting many judicious and useful additions to a book of established reputation."—Literary Journal, March 1806.

"Mr. Ferguson's Lectures stand not in need of our encomium; for, having been long before the public, and universally read and admired, their merit has been fully appreciated and established; and the useful information which they afford in the Arts, will always render them very valuable to the public."—British Critic.

A SUMMARY VIEW of HERALDRY, in reference to the Usages of Chivalry, and the General Economy of the Feudal System. With an Appendix, respecting such Distinctions of Rank as have place in the British Constitution, by Thomas Brydson, F. A. S. 1 vol. royal 8vo.—Price 10s. 6d. boards.

"It may perhaps be but justice to declare, that the ingenious author of this work has comprised, in the space of an octavo volume, all that is worthy of general promulgation on the subject of Heraldry. To those superficial students of the science, who mean to content themselves with blazoning arms and sketching pedigrees, his book will be useless. It will neither enable them to detect the owner of a single coach, nor will it add one alliance to their store of geneological information: But the Historian and the Poet, nay, the Lawyer and the Politician, will peruse it with pleasure; while the more careless reader, who, pursuing none of the regular paths of literature, steps occasionally into all, will be equally gratified and surprised, when he finds that Heraldry has some relation to all sciences, is connected with every branch of civil polity, and influences, in a considerable degree, the general manners of society.

"It is a pleasing circumstance to find elegance and liberal information thus happily connected with a science usually perplexed, as Heraldry is, by technical terms, and grotesque figures. Mr. Brydson's book may be recommended, as we have already hinted, to intelligent readers of all descriptions, who will find in it much that is amusing and instructive, without any unpleasant mixture." —British Critic, March 1796.

"Those who will take the trouble of perusing the present volume, will find in it more than it promises, and will be sufficiently paid for their pains. The Author has studied the subject with attention, and has condensed his matter with care and taste; so that his details are never tedious, but are for the most part entertaining. The language is clear and appropriate; and if it be not always purely classical, it is never vulgar and turgid.

"Mr. Brydson gives a neat Summary Account of the Distinctions of Rank included in the British Constitution, with their different privileges and precedency. This is a well digested abridgement of our best writers on the subject. On the whole, as we have read the volume with pleasure, we cannot help recommending it to all who wish to have, at small cost, a proper idea of Heraldry, Ranks, and Privileges, especially of those which are peculiarly our own."—Monthly Review, Sept. 1796.

ANNALS of COMMERCE, MANUFACTURES, FISHERIES, and NAVIGATION, with brief Notices of the Arts and Sciences connected with them; containing the Commercial Transactions of the British Empire, and other Countries, from the earliest Accounts to the Meeting of the Union Parliament in January 1801; and comprehending the most valuable part of the late Mr. Anderson's History of Commerce, viz. from the year 1492 to the end of the Reign of George II, King of Great Britain, &c. with a large APPENDIX, containing Chronological Tables of the Sovereigns of Europe, Tables of the Alterations of Money in England and Scotland, a Chronological Table of the Prices of Corn, and a Commercial and Manufactural GAZETTEER of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, with a General Chronological Index. The Ancient Part composed from the most authentic Original Historians and Public Records, printed and in manuscript; and the Modern Part from materials of unquestionable authenticity (mostly unpublished), extracted from the Records of Parliament, the Accounts of the Custom-house, the Mint, the Board of Trade, the Post-office, the East India Company, Bank of England, &c. by David Macpherson, in 4 large vols. royal 4to. Dedicated, by permission, to the Directors of the Hon. East India Company, 8l. 8s. boards.

"The Annals of Commerce are a stupendous assemblage of well-selected materials, hardly a page of which can be perused without pleasure and instruction.

"This work will be found equally interesting to the man of letters, to the philosopher, and the statesman. It abounds with curious and amusing details, with facts well calculated to excite reflection, and from which the most important conclusions may be drawn. It shews the revolutions which commerce has undergone, the restrictions with which it has at times been fettered, the bold and hazardous enterprises which the commercial spirit has inspired, and the ruinous speculations which it has sometimes proceed."—Critical Review, October 1806.

The LIFE of ST. COLUMBA, the Apostle and Patron of the Ancient Scots and Picts, and joint Patron of the Irish, commonly called Colum-Kille, the Apostle of the Highlands, by John Smith, D. D. one of the Ministers of Campbelton, Honorary Member of the Antiquarian and Highland Societies of Scotland, 1 vol. 8vo.—Price 3s. sewed.

"The Life of this celebrated Saint of the sixth century was written in Latin by two of his successors, Cummin and Adomnan. Their performances, like other works of the same nature, and of the same age, are filled with visions, prophecies, and miracles. Dr. Smith has, therefore, undertaken to disencumber the memoirs of this great and good man from the miraculous garb with which they have been so long invested; to separate the fact from the fable, and to shew the Saint in his real character."—Monthly Review, Dec. 1798.

DISSERTATIONS on the EXISTENCE, ATTRIBUTES, PROVIDENCE, and MORAL GOVERNMENT of GOD, and on the Character, Security, and Happiness, of his Righteous Subjects, by the Reverend David Savile, A. M. Edinburgh, 1 vol. 8vo.—Price 7s. boards.

"The learned and pious author of these Dissertations, by a rare felicity of composition, in an elaborate argument on some of the most sublime and abstruse points of theology, and most perplexing and intricate questions of morals, has happily blended a concise appeal to the understanding of his readers, with a pathetic address to the heart; he labours not only to convince their reason, but to influence their conduct, so as to lead them to act in conformity to a well-founded faith; and in the discharge of our inspectorial office, we have scarcely seen a tract, which, in so short a compass, conveys so much solid and useful information on the momentous subjects which it discusses and recommends.

"In his Dissertation on the Prospect of a Future State opened by the Gospel, the Knowledge of Eternal Life, and the Glory of the Rigeteous in Heaven, are several exellent arguments, and animated passages, naturally springing from the grandeur and sublimity of the subject, which our scanty limits will not suffer us to transcribe, but the perusal of which we earnestly recommend to our readers. It will make them both wiser and better; and were our opinion to have any weight with public teachers, and with the heads of our learned universities, we know no single volume, on these subjects, from its plainness and impressiveness, so fit to be introduced as a class-book in the education of youth." Anti-Jacobin Review, Aug. 1808.

A DISSERTATION on MIRACLES, containing an Examination of the Principles of David Hume, Esq. in an Essay on Miracles, by the late George Campbell, D. D. Principal of the Marischal College, and one of the Ministers of Aberdeen, a new edition, 12mo.—Price 3s. 6d. bound.

"The genteel and ingenious manner in which our author speaks of his adversary, must give every impartial reader a favourable opinion of his candour; and those who are qualified to judge of such subjects, will, we are persuaded, after an attentive perusal of his Dissertation, entertain as favourable an opinion of his abilities."—Monthly Review for June 1762.

LECTURES on the NATURE and END of the SACRED OFFICE, and on the Dignity, Duty, Qualifications, and Character, of the Sacred Order, by John Smith, D. D. one of the Ministers of Campbelton.—Price 5s. in boards.

"To impress this duty (the duty of his office) on the mind of every conscientious Clergyman, nothing would more contribute than a perusal of the volume now before us, which enters into the detail of the subject with minuteness, with candour, and without enthusiasm. It ought to be recommended to every one previous to his engaging in the clerical profession."—European Magazine for Sept. 1798.

"The various gifts and graces indispensable to a suitable and efficient discharge of all the duties incumbent on whoever would act the part of a real Christian pastor conscientiously and faithfully, are here detailed at great length, and with equal accuracy and perspicuity."—Lady's Monthly Museum for Nov. 1798.

SERMONS on PUBLIC OCCASIONS, and a LETTER on THEOLOGICAL STUDY, by Robert late Archbishop of York. To which are prefixed, Memoirs of his Life, by George Hay Drummond, A. M. Prebendary of York, in 1 vol. 8vo. with a finely engraved Portrait of the Author.—Price 6s. in boards.

"As the collection of Sermons which this volume presents to the public, is in itself valuable, and they are become scarce, from the lapse of time since each discourse was separately printed, we doubt not that the serious reader will consider himself indebted to the present editor for thus rebuilding a monument to the talents and acquirements of the late venerable metropolitan of York. To the Sermons is subjoined, a Letter on Theological Study, addressed by the Archbishop to a private friend, which contains some very valuable hints and directions for the younger Students in Divinity. As the respective merits of each of these Sermons have already been canvassed, it will be unnecessasy for us to enter again into an investigation of their contents, farther than to state in general, that they abound in good sense and sound argument, and are replete with wise maxims of policy, both in regard to the duty of governors and the obedience due from the governed."—Monthly Review for September 1806.

OBSERVATIONS on the ZOONOMIA of ERASMUS DARWIN, M. D. by Thomas Brown, Esq. 1 large vol. 8vo.—Price 8s. in boards.

"Mr. Brown is the first formidable antagonist whom the novelty of Dr. Darwin's theories has provoked. He has entered on his investigation, however, with all the respect due to the great talents and extensive knowledge of the author whom he criticises; and whatever may have been our partiality to the beautiful fabric which he attempts to overthrow, we must consider him as a champion worthy of being admitted to the encounter.

"To conclude, we think that this book is a very respectable specimen of the author's talents and attainments. With much vigour and acuteness of mind, it exhibits a liberal and truly philosophical spirit; and though we have ventured in some instances to express a difference of opinion with Mr. Brown, we cannot take leave of his performance without intimating our hope that we shall have fresh occasions hereafter of giving our unbiassed suffrage to his abilities."—Monthly Review, June and July 1799.

MATHEMATICAL TABLES, containing the Logarithms of Numbers; Tables of Sines, Tangents, and Secants, both Natural and Logarithmic, to every Minute of the Quadrant; a Table of Versed Sines, both Natural and Logarithmic, to every Minute of the Semicircle; a Table of Sexagesimal Parts, to every second Minute, and to every two-third Minutes, reduced to the Denomination of a First Minute; and Supplementary Tables. To which is prefixed, a Particular Account of the Nature and Use of Logarithms of Numbers, Sines, Tangents, Secants, and Versed Sines, with the Manner of their Formation; by George Douglas.

By these Tables, an angle is obtained to degrees, minutes, seconds, and thirds, by a more easy and accurate method than by any other Tables in circulation; but the most striking advantage is, that of obtaining the true result of all the cases in spherical trigonometry where the result was found to be ambiguous, that ambiguity being now entirely removed by the Tables of versed sines being extended to 180 degrees, as is fully proved and examplified in the introduction. These acquirements are not to be obtained by any other Tables extant.
